Descriptions, technique used and observations included

when deeper core revealed

End of phase I
Black salve to be reapplied

End of phase II

Cancer root exposed – left it alone it's like touching a nerve.

Phase III - reaction to third application of black salve

Australian \$2 coin: 20 mm, $\frac{3}{4}$ "

Swelling as body has immune reaction.

Next the pus

Phase IV – I chased this pretty hard.
Others may be more conservative

This was, big, deep and far reaching

Resolution of phase IV

Fifth application of salve

Cycles of - swelling, pus, resolution

Black salve drawing cancer from lumps further up my arm

Jelnet dressing used under bandaging

Localised reaction separates from core

Skin starting to clear

Core of stage V comes away exposing more core

Salve reapplied – phase VI

Core reacts as surface resolves, most painful stage, 24 hr analgesics required

Swelling reducing after 3 days

Phase VI resolving

Finally getting there,
our bodies are amazing

Stage VII – only core remains

Several days later, core gone – reveals healthy flesh underneath

Phase VII – closing up

Clean new skin

Two & half months treatment time

Nine months later

Five years later

My experience

- Stinging pain for 48 hours or more managed by over counter analgesics
- Swelling and pus as dead cells purged
- Wound resolves; crust with rubbery core lifts off - of own accord
- Salve reapplied as deeper core exposed
- Process repeated till healthy skin revealed
- At no point did healthy tissue react to Black salve
- Black salve works with the body's own power to heal.

- This was a deep core with roots extending to lumps further up my arm. They ached constantly and were painful after exercise.
- The lumps in my arm are now gone, I feel much better and have more energy
- This troubling BCC had been frozen and burnt off numerous times over several years by my doctor.
- Black Salve used when BCC erupted into a bleeding, stinging, painful, very itchy sore. Having treated other BCC's within 7 days this became a journey into the unknown, trusting my body to heal. Judge for yourself.

Technique and Observations

- Small sun spots heal in 7-10 days, Treat them early when small.
- Treat larger areas one at a time.
- Rough the skin a little, or pin prick the skin so salve can penetrate. It crusts within a few hours. Unhealthy cells will react with a tingling or stinging sensation within half an hour.
- Use drops of water or glycerine and cover to keep the salve moist over a 24 hour period. If deeper, might need to wash off and reapply over a few days to start the reaction process.

- Black salve removes the protective sheath so the body recognizes foreign or unhealthy cells and has an immune response.
- I used Black salve with zinc chloride and DMSO for deep tissue work.
- Inform yourself, check out other's stories before commencing treatment. Black salve is not for everyone.
- Am I glad it did it? Yes
- Would I use Black Salve again? I already have.
